

'Wonderful U. S.' AMazes Girl Reunited With Kin GIVEN UP FOR DEAD 19 YEARS AGO AS MASSACRE VICTIM

Newburyport, March 9.—"America is wonderful. I dreamed about it but—"

In tearful reunion with the parents who thought her killed as an infant, Roxie Torosian, 20, planned her life in a new sphere here today.

She hugged her parents, a young brother and two sisters at the railroad station. The parents hadn't hugged her since Turkish soldiers raided the family when Roxie was only 10 months old.

Through an interpreter, the amazed girl told her views of America at her parents' home, 51 Munroe street.

She recalled a few things of her past in Armenia. She said she preferred to forget them.

"The big buildings, they make me dizzy. The freedom of women. Women walk along the streets after dark here. They are no good if they do that in Armenia. The people are wonderful. I dreamed about it all but—well, it's just wonderful, that's all."

Eager for School

The girl said she plans to become thoroughly American. Her first step in that direction was to choose the name Roxie, which is the Americanized version of Arax, her name in Armenia.

She was told the education she received in Armenia amounted to about the fourth grade in this country. She said:

"Then I will go to night school. I will have my brother and sisters teach me."

"I never went to school until a year ago. They had no school in our little village of Harpoot. But a year ago I went to school in Aleppo, Syria."

"My aunt, who took care of me all this time, had to marry a Turk to save herself. She was at the massacre in 1915. We thought my mother and father had been killed."

Likes U. S. Food

"I took care of her little children the past few years. But since my father located me and told me it would take a year to send the money to come over here, my aunt sent me to school."

"I never saw a steamer nor the ocean until I left Beirut over a week ago to come to America. I was seasick for three days and I was glad to get here."

"I want to thank the Travelers' Aid Society in New York and Congressman A. Platt Andrews for doing what they did for me."

One of the chief interests of the happy girl was the food in this country. She tasted bacon and eggs for the first time in her life at breakfast today.

American trains, too, in contrast to the "box car" type in Armenia, amazed her.

LYNN Officer Saves 11 IN FIRE

Three families were rescued by a Lynn reserve policeman early today when he was awakened by the crackling of flames and smoke pouring into his second floor apartment at 819 Sumner street, Lynn.

Eleven persons in all were saved from the burning building.

Reserve Officer George Healy roused his wife, Mrs. Ruth Healy, who was partly overcome by smoke. They awakened their three children, Ruth Marie, three; William, two; and Charles, one. Wrapping them in blankets they carried them to the street.

Healy rushed back into the burning wooden building and made his way to the third floor. He roused Mrs. Helen Powick, 46, and her father, Adam Somowski, 70. The two men carried Mrs. Powick to the street.

The officer then went to Joseph Jouski, owner of the building, and his wife, Mrs. Stella Jouski, their daughter, Wanda, 22, and son, Stanley, 12, still half dead, then called the fire department.

Probable accident, date unknown. Dr. Guy Randall, assistant superintendent, said the "date unknown" was accused to have been before Lambella was admitted as a patient Feb. 25.

At the autopsy, Dr. Edward W. Brown, medical examiner; Dr. N. Brown, state pathologist; and Dr. James Ryan of Easthampton, Lambella's family physician, found fractured ribs and breast, blood poisoning and dissection of the kidney and intestines. Dr. Randall said.

FORBES SELLS Credit Co. Shares

Washington, March 9 (AP)—W. Cameron Forbes, of Boston, a director in the Commercial Credit Company, Baltimore, today reported to the Securities and Exchange commission that during February he sold 2000 shares common reducing his holdings to 1000 shares.

Carl P. Danner, Boston, president of the American Ship and Leather company, reported that during February he acquired as additional compensation 191 shares 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock. This increasing his preferred holdings to 552 shares and his common holdings to 10 shares.

'Slain Girl' Joins Her Parents

ROXIE TOROSIAN ANNE TOROSIAN ARAXE TOROSIAN

Araxe Torosian, believed for many years to have been massacred in Armenia, today joined her parents and family who live in Munroe street, Newburyport. Given up for dead 19 years ago, Araxe now is to be known to her friends as "Roxie," an American version of her name. She is shown with her two sisters, Anne, 15, and Araxe, 12, named in her honor when she was believed dead. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Classmates at Rites Limburger Cheese Raises Odor to Plague Farley

Washington, March 9.—First it was Huey Long, then ungummed imperforate "gift stamps," then Long again—and now it is cheese that raised an odor to plague Postmaster General James A. Farley.

It all started when an enterprising citizen of Monroe, Green County, Wisconsin, proud of his self-advertising product, sent a package of limburger to a friend at Independence, Iowa. It was promptly spotted by the able Warren F. Miller, postmaster of Independence, and as promptly returned to John J. Burkhard, postmaster at Monroe.

Said Miller to Burkhard: "Postal orders prohibit shipment of limburger cheese through the mails because of its odor."

Said Burkhard, returning the package to Miller: "This is different. It has been so wrapped in tinfoil and wax paper that the package has no odor."

Again Miller returned it, again Burkhard sent it to Independence and again it returned.

Burkhard decided only Farley could settle the question and addressed the package to the postmaster general.

But Farley rushed to Richmond and made a speech, leaving his subordinate to air the properties of limburger versus the mails.

Returning, he learned the question had been decided. Emerging from a huddle, bureau officials declared it had been so wrapped as to odor penetrate to the outer shell. As such, there is no objection to its transmission through the mails.

These were the Lemke farm re-financing inquiry bill, the Patman inflation bonus bill, the Townsend old age plan and the London unemployment insurance measure.

Without forming a union, leaders of the Lemke and Townsend forces planned, special campaigns to obtain signatures of members to petition to force their bills from committees.

The Patman forces were rounding up votes for a test with the Vinton non-inflation bonus bill when the issue reaches the floor, probably next week.

Pocket Picked

Philip S. Block of 201 St. Botolph street, Back Bay, was robbed of a briefcase containing $6 when he left a downtown theater, he told police.

At the scene, Block said he was walking toward the theater when he was stopped by a man who asked him for money.

Block refused and the man threatened to harm him. Block then ran and the man followed him for a short distance before he was lost.

Block reported the robbery to the police and is now being questioned about the case.

The police are looking for a man who was seen running away from the scene of the robbery.

Block is now being treated for his injuries and is expected to recover.

The police are continuing their investigation of the robbery.

HORSE Racing in PERIL

CAMBRIDGE IN NEW FIGHT

After all the shooting and all the shouting, it is becoming increasingly evident that the Massachusetts may have neither a horse nor a dog track to attend this year.

Today, it was learned that, under the provisions of the law itself, operation of horse races in Suffolk County is about an impossibility. Holding of races in other parts for the Commonwealth, too, is so bound up with conditions as to make it practically impossible.

Grave doubt also is expressed by some as to the intentions of Walter O'Hara.

After proposing a two million dollar Suffolk County track, he suddenly withdrew and announced plans of founding a track in Natick.

It is believed that O'Hara will be no track, either in East Boston or Natick.

Combine Seen

It was said, too, that the Rockingham and Narragansett may combine forces and capital, in an effort to keep racing from Massachusetts.

As long ago as last summer, it was reported that O'Hara was a silent partner of Lou Smith in the Suffolk County track, having sold Smith financially.

It is declared that the secret partnership still exists.

It is further said that neither O'Hara nor Smith wish to see racing in Massachusetts.

Both plants are within 30 miles of Boston, and most of the money that would be lost through particular machines is Boston money.

All in all, both horse and dog racing face a dubious future at the present moment.

Cambridge Attack

Cambridge today is demanding a hearing before the Racing Commission.

In a letter to Governor's Councilman Frank A. Brooks, Acting Mayor John W. Lyons, requested him to do all in his power to force the State Racing Commission to revoke the license issued for the establishment of a dog track in Cambridge.

The principal point of attack of those who do not wish horse racing here was revealed today. The barrier exists quarterly and fairly on the language of Section 3 of the 1924 act as follows:

"(b) No license shall be issued to permit horse racing to be held or conducted, except in connection with a state or county fair, at the same time as more than one race track within the Commonwealth, nor at any time as a race track located within 50 miles of another race track, one mile or more in circumference."

Under the language quoted above it is believed by some that the action of Suffolk County who voted a "mighty yes" on the proposition to hold racing may involve in the pleasure of a trip to a particular Rhode Island or Lou Smith's plant in New Hampshire.

They claim the law says that no license shall be issued for a track located within 50 miles of another track.

This, they assert, means within 50 miles of the Rockingham track or within 50 miles of the Narragansett track. This would keep racing from Suffolk County.

hear that Senator Huey Long is not one of the prosperous that would give you a library with no books in it, or give a poor man a knife and fork with nothing to eat.

Having given each one of twenty-five million families a five thousand-dollar house, automobile and furniture included, the senator will see to it that each of these twenty-five million families has an income not smaller than two thousand five hundred dollars a year.

The twenty-five million little houses will cost one hundred and twenty-five thousand million dollars, the twenty-five hundred dollars a year to reach twenty-five million families would cost half that amount, or sixty-two thousand five hundred million dollars a year every year.

It seems strange that nobody ever thought of all this before. So, also, it seems strange to us, as we see the magicians take white rabbits out of milk cans, that men did not always hire magicians to attend to the rabbit supply, instead of going out in the woods and walking all day to shoot one rabbit.

Where War Rages

CASUALTIES HEAVY—Four places are singled out on this map of Greece as central points in the revolutionary strife. Kavala (No. 4) and Salonika (No. 1) have been bombarded. Rebels are reported "at the end of their rope" along the Macedonian border (No. 2), despite successes elsewhere. At the Island of Crete (No. 3) Venizelos is reported proclaiming a republic.

GREEKS FIGHT AT BULGAR BORDER

Athens, March 9.—With Greek government artillery and bombing planes hammering at Macedonian rebels and General George Kondylis' troops ready to launch a concentrated attack on the Struma river area, rumors spread in Athens this afternoon that the surrender of the secessionists was imminent.

There had been reports of a rebel advance upon Salonika being imminent, possibly marking a climax in the week-old civil war, but apparently the government decided to step in with its own force.

The movement out of Salonika was accompanied by a bombardment from the air upon the rebel stronghold of Siderokastron. It was reported that the Greek artillery was firing at 8,300 m.

Rebel Bulgarian answered the bombardment with brief fire, although apparently without effect on government planes. Reports said this was followed by a second bombardment of the stronghold.

The strategy of General Kondylis was reported to involve a continued barrage of artillery fire and airplane attacks in order to minimize the risk of loyalist troops in the attack on the Struma river area.

Government sources at the same time reported four bombing planes left the mainland in bombardment of Crete, Candia and Rhodes.

Bombardment of Athens Port Denied

London, March 9 (AP)—An unconfirmed report from Alexandria, Egypt, saying that Greek rebel ships had been bombed in the Port of Athens, was officially denied today by the Greek legation.

Turkey has not moved into the demilitarized area, although there have been some minor movements in that country, officials said.

Bulgar-Turkish Dispute Settled

Geneva, March 9 (AP)—The menacing Balkan dispute between Bulgaria and Turkey has been officially declared through friendly intervention of the League of Nations which led to a settlement. It was announced today in an official communique to the League.

Venizelos Proclaims Republic of Crete

By International News Service Belgrade, March 9.—The island of Crete has set itself up as an independent republic, said Premier Venizelos, trans-European radio reported today, quoting a proclamation said to have been broadcast from Candia.

Disputed circles here believe Venizelos intends eventually to bring Crete under Italian protection.

Rome, March 9 (INS)—The Italian government today issued an official denial that Italy was "behind" the Greek revolt to further her own interests in the Balkans.

Seeks Divorce

Reno, Nev., March 9 (INS)—Nora Pepper Palmer today filed suit to divorce Colonel A. Koeny Patton, New York society register, she married at Fort Harbord, N.Y., May 11, 1928. She charged adultery.

INSIST ON REPEAL OF 'PINK SLIP' LAW

Communicate with Your Senator and File Protest with Your Tax Return

If you pay Federal income tax you can do two things to protect yourself and your family from snoopers or criminals who are now permitted by law to learn the exact amount of your income.

You can, first, write or telegraph your Senator and demand the repeal of the "pink slip" provision of the tax law, which makes your income public.

You can, second, write to The Sentinels of the Republic, Land Title Building, Philadelphia, for the "protest" stickers which they are circulating. Then you can attach one of those stickers to your pink slip, as shown here, and distribute the others to your friends.

You are advised to do both of these things without delay.

March 15, when you must file your income tax return, is almost here.

Letters to Upside Down Girl—Now Right Side Up

ALYCE JANE READS NATION'S CHEER

Her Courage Praised

ALL AMERICA, EVEN FOREIGN LANDS SEND SYMPATHY

By PEGGY DOYLE

Fall River, March 8—Unknown a month ago, little Alyce Jane McHenry began opening the first of her letters today—and learned that she has become "America's Sweetheart."

There were not only letters, but cablegrams and radiograms—from far countries as to the first and from ships at sea as to the latter.

Police men's letters were there and letters from clergymen. There were telegrams and letters from men and women in far places and in every walk of life. There was even a letter from a World War veteran, enclosing a medal.

Here are excerpts from some of the thousands of messages the courageous 10-year-old Omaha girl with the once upside-down stomach has received:

From Sergeant Maharry of the Ottawa Police Department, Ottawa, Ont.:

"Dear Alyce: "Your courage, patience and cheerfulness have been an inspiration to all of us to bear our own burdens with a little more fortitude. The whole Ottawa police department wishes you the speediest recovery and the greatest fortune in your future life. We are all pulling for you with the certainty that your bravery will win in the end. We wish you the most pleasant convalescence. "Cheerfully yours, "Sergeant Maharry."

A little girl writes from Mount Desert, Me.:

"Dear Little Friend: I am a little girl your own age and live up here in the Catskill Mountains. I have read of your brave fight to get well and am writing you to let you know how much all the little folks up here think of you, and how we are all praying for your speedy recovery. "I am writing you from Mount Desert, Me. I have heard about your illness and saw many of your pictures in the newspapers. I wish I could face the way you do, always with a smile. I know that with your courage you will be home soon. I am one year older than you. When I have to go to the dentist I feel like a baby."

From a Priest

From a Rutherford, N. J., man:

"A thousand blessings upon you, Alyce, you brave little girl. I am waiting eagerly for you to see this beautiful day that you will soon be well. With sincere admiration."

On the stationery of St. Paul's rectory, South Hamilton, Mass., a Catholic priest writes:

"My dear Alyce: Just a word of good cheer to a brave, noble little girl who is a real heroine. I am remembering you in my masses and prayers. May God bless you, strengthen your remarkable courage and soon restore you to normal health."

From their mother, Mrs. N. Y., home in the large handwriting of childhood, Mary Louise and Alfred W. brother and sister, address the following cheerful message to the world's most famous little girl:

"Hello little pal! We have heard about you through the papers and we want to wish you the best of luck. Hurry and get well. Your little friends."

Five-year-old, living in Biddleford, N. Y., dictated the following note to her mother for Alyce Jane:

"Dear Alyce: I have been reading about you in the newspapers that our operation is over and you are getting along just fine. My mamma is always telling me what a brave little girl you are when I don't like my medicine. I like to play. I hope you can play soon. I wish we could play together some time. You have so many lovely dolls, I wish you could read about my story books. Now my mamma is going to read to me about you in tomorrow's paper."

From "Jolly Tar"

A mother of three writes from Snowshoe, Maine:

"I live in Maine, and I like little boys and girls. I have two boys, 11 and 14 years, and a girl, 12. The youngest like to play and dance. Thought being a little girl you might be interested in children. Their names are Ellen, Arthur and Viola. Well, little Alyce, I hope you get along fine, which I know you will. And you will soon be able to play again with other little girls and boys."

A well-known Bostonian residing in one of Beacon street's historic lavender-windowed homes writes:

"Dear little girl, I congratulate you, dear, on your wonderful courage. With that courage and good faith in the heavenly Father you will achieve what you desire. I offer prayer for you every night. God just feel sure, little one, that you will make your wish. He dwells within you."

"Dear little girl, I am enclosing a medal which I hope will make you seek. He dwells within you."

"Dear little girl, I am enclosing a medal which I hope will make you seek. He dwells within you."

CURLEY Maps Phone FIGHT

"BRAIN TRUST" LAYS PLANS

Governor Curley's "brain trust" will lay first plans next Thursday for his fight to reduce telephone rates 15 per cent.

The Governor announced today that a luncheon would be served that day in the Parker House for his 35 mentors, 22 of whom are authorities on economics.

The next step, he said, will be a "friendly conference" with officials of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company.

He said that he would ask telephone officials "voluntarily in submit to such a cut to save themselves and the state the expense of a suit."

The move was the fourth in Governor Curley's series in effect reductions in payments made by the public to large organizations and classifications.

Light companies have agreed to a cut of one-half cent per kilowatt hour effective April 1.

Mortgage rates charged by the insurance and banking concerns were voluntarily reduced 3/4 of 1 per cent to 3 1/2 per cent, representing a saving in the borrower of 16 2/3 per cent on interest payments.

In this connection, the Governor announced today, three banking associations had written him that they plan even further aid for home owners.

Any reduction in the telephone service rates would not affect the toll charges, as the state has no jurisdiction over interstate charges.

BOY KILLS DAD 'OVER BICYCLE' STATE BLAMES 'HEX' MOTHER

By Universal Service

Buffalo, N. Y., March 9—District Attorney Walter C. Newcomb charged here that Mrs. Elizabeth Kloes, 35, had "influenced the mind" of her 11-year-old son, Richard, that he shot and killed his father, John, handsome, six-foot salesman, in their home here.

After presenting a series of witnesses before the grand jury, Newcomb said that Richard had confessed the murder in three words: "I shot my father with the shotgun because mother told me to do it. She said he was bad. I didn't think he was bad, but I obeyed mother."

Strange marks on the body of the dead man, and also on Mrs. Kloes, who is a state of hysterical collapse at a local hospital, led Dr. Russell D. Donahue, medical examiner, to say:

"These were obviously the marks of a witch. There were also scratches on Mrs. Kloes' body, radiating from the center of her stomach like the spokes of a wheel."

Newcomb compared the marks on the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Kloes to those seen in Pennsylvania "hex" murders.

Kloes was murdered in the living room of his home. He was set in an easy chair, with his back to a couch. According to Newcomb, Richard, after plotting for some time with a wooden dummy shotgun, sat on the couch with a real shotgun hidden under a blanket, and when his father was not looking, aimed it and pulled the trigger.

Richard seemed in full realization of the significance of what he had done, but his first words after the shooting were:

"Now I can ride my bicycle."

His father had refused him permission to ride his bicycle until Spring.

Richard will not be prosecuted, Newcomb indicated, until the charges against his mother have been dropped.

Mrs. Kloes has not yet been questioned because of her condition.

ada and to the massed prayers of a nation.

Hughes, the mailman, goes from the orphanage to the Truett hospital, staggering under his burden of mail.

Today, there were 1500 letters for little Alyce, and in most of them, says her mother, appears this little declaration:

"I pray for you daily."

In her home town of Omaha, and throughout Nebraska, schools suspend classes at intervals throughout the day, and children pray for Alyce.

Optimism over her condition increased throughout the day. This noon, delightedly, she had a chicken wing and some broth.

She was allowed to open some of her gifts. There were books, dresses, sets, scarf, toys and many letters containing dollar bills with the injunction:

"Buy yourself a gift."

Alyce wants two gifts above all—either skates or a bicycle.

Newspapers mentioned yesterday (see) that Alyce had expressed a desire for macaroni and cheese. Today crates of macaroni and cheese are piled high in the hospital.

The authorities devoutly hope that Alyce does not express a wish for a piano.

His Brood Was Hungry

Medford Father of 7 Admits Robbery

While his wife and seven children slept—hungry—John E. Miller, 32, of Charlton street, Medford, was captured today in a Melrose drug store.

"The kids were hungry. The wife was hungry. I couldn't stand it any longer," police quoted him.

Miller pleaded guilty in breaking and entering and larceny of the $125 from the drug store.

He was held in the Melrose police station, awaiting arraignment Tuesday.

Miller, according to the police, was crouched in the rear of Brigham's drug store, Franklin square, Melrose Highlands, when four policemen thrust revolvers in his face.

Police said they found $135 from the drug store, $248 from an adjoining chain store and goods of both stores in piles ready to be taken away.

Patrolman Leo T. Murray discovered the break in the chain store first. He had been bored in the door as the lock could be turned.

ALYCE'S FAITH WINS POETIC PRAISE

The courage and cheerfulness displayed by Alyce Jane McHenry in the face of pain have won the nation's heart. Tributes to the smiling little girl have come from all corners of the world. Among those that appeared in her most recent prayer in verse, sent by Olga Queens of 33 Bancroft road, Wellesley Hills:

A Mother's Prayer for Alyce

"Dear Father of all little Ones, I pray That mine may feel thy tenderness this day. That now, while she must walk the paths of pain, Her eyes will not seek succoring in vain. May all her days of sunshine weave a length Of shining hours, into a rope of strength. May all her peaceful nights of healing sleep Be with her now, while blighted skies grow deep. May all the things she loves surround her bed To soothe this little hot and troubled head."

Dear Father, when my tired eyelids close, Please send a kindly angel, one who knows The way to make my baby understand That Thou art with her, Father, hold her hand!

POLICE Sift Hultman RECORD GATHER DATA FOR BATTLE

Attorney John F. Feeney, counsel for Governor Curley, was in conference with Police Commissioner McWherney today. Feeney arrived with Attorney Francis J. Mullin, Edward J. Hoy and Frank Pedenti, of the governor's office staff.

Orders were given to superiors and the clerical forces at Boston police headquarters and the station houses today to remain on duty gathering material for reports to be used by Governor Curley in his ouster proceedings against former Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman.

Vice, narcotics, gaming and liquor raid reports covering the past eight months were being gone over in minute detail.

Investigators were working under direction of Attorney Francis J. Mullin, who is collecting the data. Attorney John F. Feeney will use in efforts to "fire" Hultman from present post as chairman of the Metropolitan District Commission.

Promotions and transfers during the time of the Hultman incumbency are being checked.

Hunt Pawn Records
A close study is being made of pawnshops and junk yards, it is known.

The reason for these investigations is that it is the contention that a downtown pawnshop owner dictated the promotions and transfers.

The six-week period that former Police Commissioner Joseph J. Leonard was in office has been passed over only as it relates to Hultman's rule.

Considerable inquiry is being centered around a mysterious character who paid frequent visits to Police Headquarters which is known as "The Shadow," it became known.

Good news!
Today's Boston Evening American announces the three lucky "About Faces" followers who have won a luxurious Keystone Movie Camera, each, in the first week of Grand Awards. For a period of ten weeks, the Boston Evening American will award a total of 30 Keystone movie cameras, three each week, until the total 30 tickets are awarded each week at additional prizes.

Winners of the Keystone movie cameras are Miss Helen Johnson, 121 Williams street, Chelsea; Miss Marion McGrath, 105 St. Paul street, Brookline; and Dr. M. Lawrence, 45 Mandarkey road, Chestnut Hill. May you all have fun and pleasure with these handsome Keystone movie cameras!

Today's clue to the above "About Faces" leads you to the popular Lynn Paramount Theatre where the screen offering, "Dance of the Vampires," is being shown. Copperfield, Manager J. J. Dempsey has surrounded this excellent picture with a series of splendid short subjects including "Live Ghosts," with Laurel and Hardy, "Poppy," and other screen features. HELEN MCCOLLAM

Miss Helen McCollam, a secretary in the office of the Reconstruction Corporation, today was married to William B. Darn, second son of the secretary of war. The wedding was solemnized at a simple ceremony in the Mt. Pleasant Congregational church in Washington. (Pictures from International News Photograph Service.)

Regarding reports that the hearing might not go on Wednesday and that Hultman desired a postponement, Governor Curley said: "As far as we can see today, the hearing will go on unless Mr. Feeney becomes ill or Mr. Hultman resigns."

Feeney said the hearing would start Wednesday.

with a machine gun, will precede the caravan. Two others, also carrying machine guns, will bring up the rear.

The trip will be made at a 60-mile-an-hour clip.

As they leave Dedham jail will be flooded with light. Thirty state troopers will be on guard. As will the entire Dedham police force under Chief of Police Charles A. Cahill.

The prisoners will be placed in the Cherry Hill section of state prison.

It is understood that three lifers are to be moved from that section to make room for the Dedham machine gun slayers.

Under Many Guns

Transfer of the prisoners at this time instead of waiting until April 15-10 days before the date of execution, was made possible by a law passed in the Legislature yesterday and signed by Governor Curley.

Sherriff Capen must get a new warrant from Judge Nelson P. Bennett.

The regulation equipment will be carried in all six of the state police automobiles. This includes: Three saved-off shotguns, four hand grenades, a supply of cartridges for the shotguns, six flare and the regulation 38 revolver.

In addition, the first car and the last two cars will be equipped with machine guns.

It was learned today that the state police would rather move the trip during the daytime, but that Capen objected to the plan, insisting that at night the speeding caravan would avoid crowded streets.

It was also pointed out by the sheriff that the cars would be able to make the trip at a mile-a-minute clip if going at night.

WORKER Crushed to DEATH BODY TOSSED BY CONVEYOR

Back and forth across the yards of the White Fuel Corporation in South Boston, loaded buckets on the conveyor moved, carrying fuel from one pocket to another.

And there, almost 100 feet in the air, tragedy struck swiftly just before dawn. The machinery stopped.

Just a little trouble somewhere along the line, the men reasoned. They would soon take care of that. Mike Flaherty would fix it.

And Mike Flaherty was startled out of his early morning somnolence when upon investigation he discovered that, notwithstanding two lawsuits were in the woman's body it was possible for her to have lived five minutes after the shooting and to have placed the gun where it was found.

The horrified Mike tugged manfully at the heavy belt. Fortunately he fought it to release his companion, sobbing out great breaths, screaming to the other men to get help.

They called the police. Sgt. William Long of the South Boston station answered with a squad of men. So did Laddie Company 1 and Rescue Company 1.

They got the twisted form out of the drum, and rushed it to the City Hospital. "Dead on arrival," they said.

The machinery rattled on.

BISHOP Freed from MEXICO JAIL

By Universal Service

Mexico City, March 9.—Archbishop Pascual Diaz, prelate of the Catholic church in Mexico, was freed 100 pesos (about $27) on a charge of "violation of the religious laws," and released after spending 20 hours as the prisoner of the Mexican government.

Returning to his residence, he was immediately to bed. The archbishop said he had a headache caused by lack of food and water during his detention.

He said he is profoundly grateful to the American people and Senator Borah in particular for their concern over him. At his residence he found a stack of telegrams from the United States, sent after he was taken into custody last night.

Catholic Slain in Mexico Church Fight

QUINCY WOMAN Found Suicide

Following an autopsy on Mrs. Alice R. Mather of Theresa road, Quincy, Assistant District Attorney George W. Archuleta, of Norfolk county, announced today the official finding in the case was suicide.

Mrs. Mather was found fatally wounded and the death weapon was in a bureau drawer 12 feet away. The medical examiner decided that, notwithstanding two lawsuits were in the woman's body it was possible for her to have lived five minutes after the shooting and to have placed the gun where it was found.

V. F. W. Auxiliary Backs Oath Plan

Mrs. Joseph H. Hanken, National Judge Advocate of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary today endorsed the bill requiring teachers to swear allegiance to uphold state and federal constitutions.

Mrs. Hanken, on endorsing the bill, declared: "During the national convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, held in Louisville, members of the auxiliary were urged to aid in the promotion of Americanism in the American classroom."

"There is no reason why any teacher should not be required to swear loyalty to the government."

"The fundamental training received by our children is in the classroom. And it is in that classroom that we must combat any attempt to saturate the minds of the children with communism and radicalism, detrimental to the ideals of the American government."

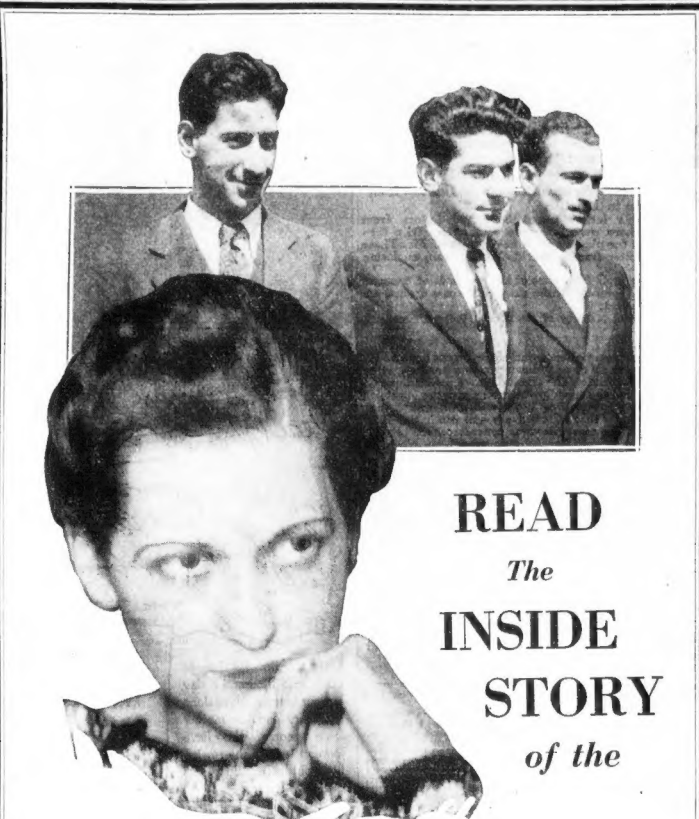

MARBLES OFF Until Snow Melts

Boston boys will not be able to play marbles in many of the public parks for some time yet, Park Commissioner William P. Long said today.

And it is all because of the rush to clear off the snow from the big storm in January, many of the parks were requisitioned as dumping grounds and still resemble something left over from the ice age.

DOPE War Centers HERE HEAD OF RING IS KNOWN

Metropolitan Boston is the distribution center for the spread of narcotics over the State of Massachusetts.

This information is in the hands of federal narcotic officials, it was learned today, after weeks of secret investigation.

The man "higher up" in spreading the dope evil here is known to federal authorities who are gradually closing a net around him.

Governor Curley has called state and Boston police to unite with federal authorities in a state-wide drive to clean up Massachusetts.

The three forces will join in the greatest war on narcotics the state has ever known.

A Back Bay dance hall, a Brookline resort, and places in the South End were centers for spreading the menace.

Owen McKenna, special Federal agent assigned to watch all Federal activities in Boston, has been devoting special attention to the narcotics situation here for several months.

A Brookline raid "fell flat" because of advance information of Federal activity here.

The dance hall in the Back Bay has been under the surveillance of federal agents for some time.

Professional peddlers here entice young girls by a friendly approach to become users and swell their trade.

Charles Burrows, federal narcotic director in New England, has been making nothing of the McKenna activities but since Governor Curley's call they will probably join forces.

Burrows has been working night and day in investigations.

Today Police Commissioner McSweeney said he would have conferences with Federal and state officials to make out a program.

Commissioner McSweeney refused to confirm a rumor that a lieutenant, sergeant and 10 additional men would be assigned to the Boston police narcotic squad.

He said he would not discuss personnel without study of the situation.

He had no comment to make regarding the activity of the Federal government as he stated he had no knowledge of it.

Meanwhile Federal officials are driving for uniform Federal and state laws to curb the evil.

Governor Curley's action in calling national, state and city forces together came after he was given reports that high school students were using dope.

He has been disturbed over the ease with which narcotics can be obtained here. He asked the state and local police to co-operate with the federal agents in a conference yesterday.

DRAINS HEART To Save Child

Little Leona Martin will soon be out doing play with her friends again, thanks to the skillful surgery of Dr. Horace K. Sowles of Brookline.

Leona, seven years old, has been sick for a long time, first with pneumonia, then with an infection about the heart.

Dr. Sowles removed a rib and drained a pint of fluid from the child's heart. Today she was able to eat really for the first time in many weeks.

ROOSEVELT On Week-End MAPS MESSAGE

Washington, March 9.—President Roosevelt entered today on what he intended to be a quiet week-end, to be spent for the most part in planning one of possibly five more messages he will send to Congress.

Outwardly untroubled over his legislative program, Mr. Roosevelt is going ahead with more proposals in the near future.

He remarked at his press conference yesterday that he had five leads from which to choose in writing his next message, which probably will be submitted early next week, but he smiled away in quips on specifying them.

There is every sign that he is ready to stick it out with Congress for his program if it takes all summer.

DEATH Penalty Decried IN CUBA STRIKE

By International News Service. Havana, March 9.—Struggling to maintain power in the face of widespread strikes directed against it, the government of President Carlos Menéndez today decreed a strict martial law in effect throughout Cuba.

The Cabinet and the Council of State, meeting jointly in emergency session, completely suspended the constitution "for the duration of the emergency."

The death penalty was restored to deal with recalcitrant strikers, and strike breakers, authorized to carry arms, were told to "shoot to kill" anyone attacking them.

The strike breakers, the cabinet ruled, will be given immunity in such cases.

Police Order Vice Cleanup

McSweeney Puts Drive Up to King

Plans were perfected behind closed doors at police headquarters today for a cleanup of vice and other illegal traffic in Boston. Details were kept secret.

Superintendent Martin H. King laid down the law to his four deputies after he had been in conference with Commissioner Eugene M. McSweeney.

It was learned the drive will be aimed at vice, gambling, traffic in dope law violations by night clubs, holdup men who have made small storekeepers their prey.

Commissioner McSweeney plans a personal tour of inspection to the various police stations in the city. Responsibility for the cleanup, however, he has put directly up to his superintendent and the four deputies.

The drive against holdup men will center in Dorchester, West Roxbury and Hyde Park.

The relative, police were informed, has frequently threatened members of the Strecher family.

ROXBURY Pinochle Player WINS TITLE

First prize in the Boston Evening American Pinochle Tournament went today to Ira Margolis of 178 Seaver street, Roxbury, who was adjudged the winner in the finals at Hotel Bradford last night.

Margolis got a cash prize of $300 with a trip to New York which lasts a week with all expenses paid to compete in the national tournament.

Two next prize winners were William Marnell of 17 Wayland street, Roxbury, and Louis Shifman of 17 Wardman street, Roxbury, who were awarded $100 each.

More than 700 players competing in the tournament, showed the highest interest in the game here. The first prize winner will make his headquarters at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Play in the national contest starts Thursday at 2 o'clock with all sessions completed by Friday night.

Representatives from 15 other cities will compete for the national championship and a cash prize of $1000.

J. Hal Sims, bridge expert, will direct the play off.

Rosamond Vahney and Lombard Williams directed the local tournament.

Fifty contestants were awarded copies of "MAY" Pinochle Pointers."

MAYOR REJECTS $1119 O'Brien Bill

In preparation for the defense of former Police Commissioner Joseph J. Leonard before the governor's council in Easter proceedings, former District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien ran up a bill of $1119. Leonard resigned before today the bill was presented to Mayor Kauffman. He refused to approve it.

O'Brien based his bill on an agreed price of $300 a week, saying he was retained by Leonard. This, according to Mayor Mansfield, does not bind the city. He thinks Leonard is personally liable.

The bill will be sent to Corporation Counsel Henry E. Foley for an opinion.

RELIEF Cost Up 500 P. C. U. S. PAYS DOLE TO 20,500,000

Copyright, 1935, by International News Service

Washington, March 9.—The public relief load has increased almost 100 per cent in number of persons, and more than 500 per cent in cash cost to the federal government in the last year, records of the Federal Emergency Relief administration revealed today.

In January, 1934, 11,086,598 persons were on emergency relief rolls. In January, 1935, the number was 20,500,000.

Emergency Relief Administration payments to states for relief in January, 1935, totaled $29,963,737. In January, 1934, the total was $13,000,000.

From the peak of 4,560,000 families on relief in March, 1933, the number of persons on relief declined to the low point of 2,608,274 families, or 11,086,598 persons, in January, 1934.

Steady Increase

Since that month there has been a steady increase, except for a slight recession last June, to the high mark of January this year. With the increase in number of persons on relief, the costs mounted steadily, except for a recession in February, 1934, to the $131,000,000 figure of January last.

The number of persons on relief by month from January, 1934, to January, 1935, inclusive, and the federal government's share of the cost as shown by allocation to the states for relief were:

January (1934) 11,086,598, $29,963,737; February 11,627,415, $30,428,508; March 15,044,282, $33,252,396; April 16,840,280, $35,399,535; May 17,253,068, $36,466,621; June 16,833,417, $35,957,646; July 17,237,728, $36,623,616; August 18,311,069, $37,800,000; September 18,412,532, $38,000,000; October 18,412,532, $38,000,000; November 18,412,532, $38,000,000; December 18,412,532, $38,000,000; January (1935) 20,500,000, $131,000,000.

With this mounting number of persons and the increased cost, the percentage of the total population of the country on relief increased. In January, 1934, 9 per cent of the population were on relief. In January, 1935, 16 per cent were "on the dole."

BLONDE Is Hunted in BEVERLY THEFT

An attractive blonde girl, riding in a high-powered sedan, with a German police dog by her side was sought by Beverly police today as a female fugitive.

It was she, they believe, who had made her way, with a skeleton key, into three exclusive summer homes in exclusive Price's Crossing.

From one of the homes, that of Mrs. Harold Jefferson Cowdrey, of Chestnut street, Beacon Hill, eight valuable fur pieces were taken, four of them of rare skin and hand-painted panels, family heirlooms.

The homes of Philip S. Sears and of Dr. Thomas O. Shepard, close by Mrs. Cowdrey's in historic Branch lane, were ransacked from top to bottom.

As yet these owners are not certain what is missing, but inventory is being taken.

Police said they thought the girl played a lone hand, except for the dog. The dog, they believed, was ported as the boldest white. The girl baffled made her break.

CLUB LICENSE Suspended 3 Days

The Boston Licensing Board today suspended the club license of the Market Employers Club, South Market street, for three days on complaint of police.

Another complaint brought by the police against the Row Club, in Newspaper Row, was placed on file.

Parents' Lecture

Dr. Ada Hart Armit, professor of child care and training at the University of Cincinnati, will discuss "Parent Patterns—Models Which Guide Children's Behavior" Tuesday at Boston University school of education's course for parents.

TWO PASSENGERS On Liner Injured

Mailfax, March 9 (INS).—Battered gales, the liner Duchess of Bedford arrived today 24 hours late with two women passengers injured. One broke her arm when she fell from an icy deck. The other broke her arm when she fell to her cabin floor.

Poison Pastry Victims Mount

2 DEAD, 164 ILL
IN RHODE ISLAND

Providence, March 9.—Nineteen additional cases of bacterial poisoning were revealed today, bringing the total up to 164 persons made ill by tainted cream puffs in Pawtucket, Warwick, Cranston and Barrington. Two children have died.

Several others were in serious condition. New legislation regarding the supervision and inspection of bakeries is being introduced today, as Attorney General John P. Hartigan conferred with Inspector Slide.

The Providence inspector of health would be seriously considered.

The source was sudden and widespread, practically every Rhode Island city reporting dozens from cream puffs at the same time.

The two children who died were

Ellie Roy, 14-year-old sufferer from diabetes, who lived in Woonsocket, and Norman Chittenden, 3, of Pawtucket.

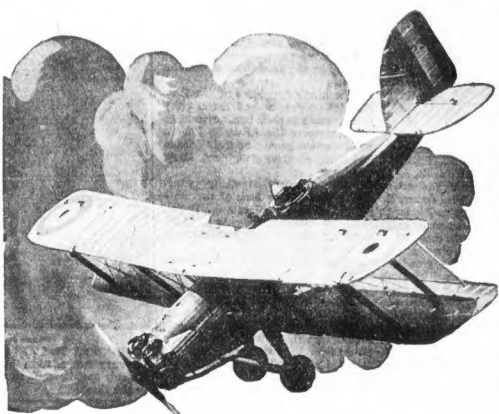

PATROLMAN Charges Frame-Up

Gloicester, March 9.—City Hall authorities were notified to the doors as Patrolman Silva took the stand in his own defense to answer charges that he had been intimidated while on duty.

He charged that his removal from his beat for being drunk was a "frame-up."

HEAVEN HIGH —HELL DEEP

by Norman Archibald

the TRUE story of wartime aviation that ranks with "Journey's End" and "All Quiet on the Western Front"

Here is the shuddering impact of true drama upon the senses—what our American war pilots ACTUALLY experienced as, gallant and heroic, they winged into the sky to live or die in glorious adventure. HEAVEN HIGH—HELL DEEP ranks with "Journey's End" and "All Quiet on the Western Front" as a narrative of war experiences. It is recommended by the Book-of-the-Month Club and Literary Guild. Don't miss a single instalment of this great serial. It will hold you spell-bound from beginning to end.

Busy With Plans for Opera Season

By BETTY ALDEN

IF YOU TRAIN your opera glasses on the Golden Horseshoe during the season of the Metropolitan here in April, you will find many familiar faces among those privileged to sit in the famous boxes. Some of the old-time opera goers will be missing but such a large number of our first family names are on the list of boxholders that a colorful and brilliant opening is assured.

Boston society in its most sparkling mood will be out to prove that the Hub is not called the center of culture for nothing and that duchesses and princesses have nothing on the fashionableness of this city when they get dressed up in their best furs and jewels.

MRS. DEVEREUX BARKER, JR.

Parties Planned

FAMOUS FOR DISPENSING hospitality during the opera season, the R. Devereux Barkers will give several large parties in their box. The Junior Devereux Barkers will probably assist them with host and hostess responsibilities during the week. With many attractive young people among their guests.

Mrs. M. Graeme Haughton, who last season favored cables instead of ermine for her evening wraps, will be seen in their box seated with her many family connections, the group shining brightly in the semi-circle of socially elite.

The newly daughters of the Donald McKay Forest will accompany their parents in their box, adjacent to the box where the Alvan T. Fullers will entertain groups of their friends and those of their daughters, Mary and Lydia.

Martha Endicott never misses an opera, especially as her distinguished father, H. Wendell Endicott, is head of the committee responsible for this week of musical treats. Praise enough cannot be extended to the enterprising citizens who serve on the committee with Mr. Endicott and the splendid group of guarantors who so generously support the opera.

Martha's grandparents, Colonel and Mrs. Francis T. Maxwell, have written from Palm Springs, California, for seats to be ready for them when they return from their vacation in the West. The Maxwells are Mrs. Endicott's parents and make their home in Rockville, Ct.

Other boxes have been reserved by Mrs. Harold Keith. Mrs. Roger Whitcomb and Mrs. George H. Monks, Jr. have reserved seats for Mrs. A. Wentworth, Mrs. Oliver Colburn, Mrs. Edmund N. Paine, Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, Mrs. Louis Frothingham, Mr. Alexander Whitehead, Mr. John B. Paine, Mrs. John S. Cook, Mrs. Louis Curtis and many others who will be seen presiding in their places in the Golden Horseshoe.

Among Season Ticket Holders

SEASON TICKET HOLDERS for the week include Mr. and Mrs. Pierpont Stockpole, Colonel and Mrs. Thomas Bradley, Mrs. Charles G. Weld, Mrs. Edgar Pierce, Mrs. Henry Wheeler, Mrs. John Lowell, Mrs. Grant Walker, Miss Mary B. Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. J. Tucker Burr, Mrs. William H. Ames, Jr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Mosley, Mrs. Montgomery Sears, Mrs. Lucia Thayer, Mrs. George S. Munford, Mrs. Stanwood T. Wellington, Mrs. Leonard Ahi and Mr. Herbert Lyman. All of which promises that the Opera House will be gay with Boston's music lovers in their best finery, overflowing the boxes, loges, orchestra circle and the balconies.

There is nothing like a fashion show for drawing multitudes out for luncheon. This time of year, you will behold on Tuesday at the Carlton a gathering of our aristocratic circles luncheon and a parade of the loveliest creations designed by Parisian fashion artists and presented here by one of society's favorite shows.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Warren Walker are giving a dinner party at their Brimmer street home on March 12th.

Latest Tidings of the Vincent Venetures

MRS. ERNEST B. DANF, JR., has been selected as head flower vendor for the show.

Her corps of attractive assistants who will use their most appealing sales arguments to sell posies to the audience will include Helen Marshall, Lydia J. Draper, Mrs. Francis H. Cummings, Martha Swift, Mrs. Terry Colburn, Mrs. Edmund N. Paine, Jean Reed, Peggy Blake, Mrs. Francis A. Harding, Ramelle Cochran, Mary L. Cunningham and Anne H. Sims.

Other flower vendors will be Mrs. Daniel F. Codman, Mary Strong, Rosamond Gardner, Mrs. Benjamin Thorndike, Hope Hubbard, Juliet Richardson, Mrs. Robert J. Leonard, Mrs. Edward L. Francis, Carolyn Samson, Mrs. Leopold Grover, Susan Means, Jane Hamlin and Sally Gallagher.

Edith Parker composed the pantomime and Polly Gardner designed the costumes for one of the cleverest numbers of the show in which Eleanor Williams and Marjorie Stiltonall have been selected to star. Polly Gardner will be one of the characters of the skit, as will May Bryant as a grocer boy, Anne Blake, Alice Gallagher and Alice Spaulding.

An appealing trio of blues singers will be Betsy Byron, Sally Byron and Peggy Macomber.

Smith Alumnae in aid around Boston will have an opportunity to do their bit for the Scholarship Fund by attending the Smith reunion at the opening night of Ina Claire's new play, "Ode to Liberty," at the Plymouth on March 18.

Mrs. Francis Tully, president of the Boston Smith Club is being assisted in planning this benefit by Margaret Hinchley, Mrs. Amy Hubbard Abbott, Mrs. Vaughan Danby, Mrs. Vincent Farnsworth, Jr., and Mrs. Edgar Manson.

Love Denied
Sharlene Is Tired

By Louise Long and Ethel Doherty

CHAPTER 48

He was amazed to see how happy she was about her housekeeping, and was touched at her triumphant pleasure in her own growing efficiency.

She pursued and conquered her tasks with a tenacity of purpose equal to his own. They were able to slip into a pleasant camaraderie, being possessed of a gay understanding of each other's whimsical thoughts and fancies which served for endless conversation. But nothing vital was ever talked out.

Consequently, Stuart was always conscious of a veil between them. He had a firm grip on his emotions—no more useless suffering for him. Sharlene loved Kent Damerell over and above and through everything. They were singularly lucky in being undisturbed during the long busy days, but of course it could not last. One evening when they were sitting before the fire, too lazily content even to talk, they heard voices of people coming up the hill. Sharlene flew to the kitchen. The door sounded on the door.

It was a group of Stuart's friends. As soon as he got them interested in the panels he slipped out to the kitchen.

Needs Her Rest "I'll get rid of them as soon as I can, Sharlene. Wait for me. I don't want you going down the hill alone. There have been too many holdups."

"All right, Stuart. But no should not enjoy them and forget about me. I want to try a new cake recipe anyway."

He moved some drinks and she put glasses on the tray for him. They went a step longer, he assured her as he carried the tray forward. But they did not stay until after midnight, ignoring the imminence of Stuart's arrival. When he finally closed the door on them he hurried to the kitchen.

Sharlene had worked so hard all day, she needed her rest. She turned on the light and found a note pinned to the door. It was a note from Stuart. He had heard Sharlene's voice and instantly she cocked her ear to that direction.

Sharlene came through the kitchen into the study. She found a note pinned to the door. It was a note from Stuart. He had heard Sharlene's voice and instantly she cocked her ear to that direction.

her tired hands. He removed it gently and since she did not stir, he forebore to awaken her. Instead he brought a blanket to cover her, and put out the light.

Suddenly he trembled with a rush of feeling like the unbearable return of circulation for a limb long numb. He yearned over her. He longed to gather her in his arms and kiss her eyelids. She slept quietly on like a tired child, unknowing.

Idyll Is Broken Now he would have to make her go away again—no, he would go away himself. The idyll was broken.

Stuart slept late the next morning for he did not close his eyes until dawn. Through his heavy sleep he finally became aware of a steady, rhythmic sound from the back yard and rolled over to peer out the window.

Sharlene was spading up a new flower bed.

He had just finished dressing when someone tried the front door and then knocked. He unlocked it, and there stood Julie, hunched, smiling, impudent, gaily appeared.

"Hello, darling!" she chirped, throwing herself into his arms. "Gosh, I'm glad to see you again!"

"When did you get in?" he asked with stiff lips.

"Yesterday in prison. We flew down here last night. She dropped her arms and pushed past him into the study, surveying it quickly. "Gosh, everything seems so just the same, doesn't it? Same old paints—same old pictures—everything."

She turned her bright eyes on Stuart, who had remained in the open doorway. "You look as well! Haven't seen anybody who looks so good to me since I left home."

There was some sort of disturbance in the back door. Stuart heard Sharlene's voice and instantly she cocked her ear to that direction.

Start the Day With a Thought of God

Says Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving

The Forward Movement of the Episcopal Church has adopted for Lenten practice seven watchwords. I give you the first of them, which is the simple word "turn."

I like the word "turn"—a modern religious word, which implies far more than it says. It is an invitation to turn our attention toward God.

"How to do that," said a young girl, "could mystify me, but I know how to turn my attention toward Jesus Christ, and that is fortunate."

Here is something we each can do. We may feel so hard pressed that at the moment we cannot try harder, and have no room for bearing more burdens. But to turn our attention toward God—that we can readily do.

Let us experiment anew by turning our attention toward God when we first wake up in the morning.

When you awake in the morning, what do you first turn your attention to? You look out of the window to discover what sort of day it is.

In Boston, in the winter, that is a rather discouraging way to start the day, because, ten to one, it looks grey, cheerless, cold, and somewhat gloomy.

Or, when you come to, after a night's sleep, do you immediately appraise how inadequate the night's sleep has been?

And if you have been restless and fidgety in your sleep, do you feel that it will be a poor day that you will be under par for your responsibilities?

Or perhaps, in a cheerier mood, do you wake up thinking first of coffee, or what you are going to wear, or what fun you can get that day, what your own plans are?

Now, I confess that all these first thoughts I have tried, and yet I am convinced of another alternative, and that is that the first waking thought should be upward toward God.

As soon as you gain consciousness tomorrow morning, point your thoughts toward the providence and goodness of Him who has given us one more day's opportunity for living, the one who has kept us alive, who has put us in this marvelous, intricate world, the one who gives us the privilege of friendship and influence, who makes all life an adventure of the mind, who gives us the opportunity of discovering what is new, of learning every day of pointing toward eternity which we dimly surmise here.

There is a wrong way and a right way to start the day. There is a secular way and a religious way.

We merely say the religious way is better. It is psychologically more sound, more productive.

It invites us into a better atmosphere. We all have the privilege of turning our thoughts towards Christ, towards God, in the morning.

Or, when you awake in the morning, do you immediately appraise how inadequate the night's sleep has been?

And if you have been restless and fidgety in your sleep, do you feel that it will be a poor day that you will be under par for your responsibilities?

Or, when you come to, after a night's sleep, do you immediately appraise how inadequate the night's sleep has been?

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FARFAX and NELI BRINKLEY

Solution for Unemployed Boy Who Is In Love

I RECEIVED a letter from a boy who says he is very much in love with "the most lovely girl in the world," but that this girl thinks he doesn't care for her any more because he is not "acting the way he should toward her."

He goes on to explain that he is out of work and feels out of place, and "just doesn't know what to do, from worrying."

This problem is interesting for two reasons. First, because there must be many other boys in the same predicament, and second, because it is one of those "vicious circle" problems.

Of course a man should not be judged, these days, by whether or not he is working. But he is still going to be judged by the opinion of his sweetheart. It means that it is necessary to be somewhat successful in life. But to have others believe in him he must first believe in himself.

No doubt, the boy will sympathize and willing to help, but for some reason, it is natural to turn a barrier of bitterness and discouragement against the one who is the cause of his trouble.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: My mother is of a very nervous type. I can't go to high school, and I go to "young men's" parties where I have met a very college graduate whom I see almost every day.

Lately I've heard he has been absent several times, but always been sober in my company. I feel certain that I could stop his drinking if I went with him. I care for him enough at least.

FORLORN Many women, a good deal older than my own, would drink. But this dream of reformation almost never comes to pass. And it is when you're still in high school, when you're most impressionable, that you attempt this sort of missionary work.

I hope you will not be the millionth girl to cherish this futile dream.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: We skated together a number of times at the rink and enjoyed each other's society immensely. He wanted to see me home, but I didn't know anything about him. I declined. When I met him at the rink a second time he did not invite me to skate and was evidently mad that I had not let him see me home.

I go once or twice a week, but never see him at the rink any more. He was such a nice fellow, I'm sorry I turned him down.

PRUDENCE If you were not introduced to him by any of your friends or acquaintances at the rink, it seems to me you would have been only to be expected of a "nice" girl in declining to have a stranger as a suitor.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: Six months ago my wife was given a divorce by default, and the custody of the children. I am paying her $100 a month alimony. I work nights and had no time or inclination to go to bed with her.

EX-HUSBAND She met some man whom I don't know. I just can't forget the day she did me wrong. I still love her. The worst part of it is, she knows she can get me. I say time she wants to "should I go?"

The Fortunes of Fanny

HER MOTHER. HER BROTHER. THIS IS FANNY.

NELI BRINKLEY introduces FANNY to you. She is just a bright, up-and-coming, pretty American girl. She is only sixteen and already devastating. Her father and mother are average, good parents, very well-to-do, from their own efforts in the typical American way and "wrapped up" in their children, Fanny and her small Pennodish brother. They live in a middle-sized Ohio town. Fanny is beginning to keep them mentally and physically on their toes. And however surprising Fanny is, they never seem to get any farther than "NOW, FANNY!" Fanny openly doesn't care for the name Fanny, and cannot conceive why a parent should name a child that "poky" name. But that was her Papa's sister's name, so Fanny has to bear it. She secretly signs herself to her girl friends, and to those innumerable young men and older women she "adores" in succession—"Fanchon." There's a name!

The next picture will be the first of Fanny's life told in terms of her Fallings-in-love.

PRETTY HOME FROCK Square Neck Is Smart

By MARIAN MARTIN PATTERN 9316

Soft little gathings and big, colored buttons put a world of smartness into Marian Martin's new house dress.

You'll like the square neck and the sleeves that extend to its line—lovely sleeves that are so easy to make.

Getting back to buttons—you may have them as novel as you please, from wood to glass.

Choose them in a color to point up the predominant tone in the cotton print you use—or make the frock of many colorful stripes or plaided serenade.

Pattern 9316 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32. Size 38 requires 3½ yards 36-inch fabric. Send fifteen cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern.

Mashed VERSUS Baked POTATOES

By MARTHA LEE A DISCUSSION arose in the cooking school yesterday as to whether mashed were more fattening than baked potatoes.

We hold to the fact that a potato is a potato whatever the method of cooking and is a very valuable food for its vitamin content.

The idea that mashed potatoes are more fattening arose from the fact that more butter and cream are used in preparing mashed potatoes than in the baked. An ordinary stoned potato in 100 calories while one tablespoon of butter used on the potatoes is also 100 calories.

MASHED POTATOES 1½ quarts water 1 teaspoon salt 1½ cups milk 1½ cups butter 1½ cups cream. Boil potatoes in water until tender. Drain and add salt and cream. Mash with butter and cream.

SCALLOPED RAW POTATOES (4 servings) 4 medium potatoes 2 tablespoons butter 2 tablespoons flour Milk (about 2 cups) Pars potatoes and cut in thin, crosswise slices. Reserve enough potatoes for a top layer. Place half the potatoes in a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with fat cut into tiny bits or melted.

SPINACH 1½ quarts water 1½ cups milk 1½ cups butter 1½ cups cream. Boil potatoes in water until tender. Drain and add salt and cream. Mash with butter and cream.

AVIS TELLS HOW "BURGLAR" ESCAPED

CHAPTER 385 AVIS ARLEN is not particularly quick-witted, but she caught immediately Lillian's point concerning her tale of hearing the movements of the man with the moccasins.

"I didn't say I heard his feet going down the ladder," she said sullenly.

"Indeed, if I hadn't been listening for them, I don't believe I would have heard him cross the balcony floor. But I heard the ladder creak as he struck each one, and it made a noise when he first started down it."

"Oh, Hugh!" Avis quavered, her voice lingering over his name. "Where are you going? Don't leave me!"

HUGH INVESTIGATOR "I'm going to see that ladder," he threw back over his shoulder, not pausing in his stride.

"But it isn't there," Avis said, with haste that seemed to be to hold something frantic. "I heard the man dragging it away. I'm so frightened without you!"

"I could have told you I wasn't there, either," Lillian said as if she were talking to herself. "I heard the ladder creak as he struck each one, and it made a noise when he first started down it."

"Oh, Hugh!" Avis quavered, her voice lingering over his name. "Where are you going? Don't leave me!"

Slenderize Bath Salts Guide To Sylph Lines

By The Beauty Editor IF YOU WANT to get thin, but are past the medicine ball and gymnastic stage, a hot bath with reducing salts will probably do the trick.

There are two schools of action when it comes to reducing—inordinate diet followers who alternately starve and gorge themselves—and those who merely sit and wait and hope for fat to melt away.

Even if you are a home-ridden body, and trips abroad are indulged in only in fancy, you've probably heard of a famous watering resort in Germany where the elite of Europe rush when they find their figures suddenly going to pieces.

This spa is world famous for its invigorating mineral baths. Women also flock there when their weight has gotten beyond them and reducing is past the point where anything short of the radical will help.

From a famous Fifth avenue salon, rendezvous of discriminating American women, comes an amazing new scientific discovery, based on the German system of reducing, that actually dissolves fatty tissues.

These slenderizing baths will reduce the weight about three to five pounds in one treatment. The process is as simple and safe as it is swift. You merely add a tablespoonful of the salts to a tub full of hot water. One remains in such a bath for ten or fifteen minutes—no longer.

The best time for these baths is at night—just before retiring. Immediately on leaving the bath, jump into bed and pull the blanket tightly about you. You will prepare (ready for) to half an hour and of course, you must not get up, against, catching cold.

These slenderizing salt baths should be indulged in only by those who are in good health. While such baths are highly effective, they are not for those who are too frail for them, and are too drastic for persons suffering from physical distress.

A bottle of these salts should last about ten days. If at the end of that time you desire to lose still more weight, alternate with a special strengthening bath, a cold shower, and return to the slenderizing salts.

While these salts are not cheap in price, they are nevertheless quite effective as the treatments offered at the German watering resort. If you can't go away, you will both benefit and save pounds before the Easter parade, as economical as any.

To learn the name of these slenderizing baths, call the nearest Liberty Bell store which carries them, call the nearest Liberty Bell store or write to her at the Boston Liberty Bell Store, 100 South Street, Boston, stamped, self-addressed envelope for a reply.

PRIZE WINNERS
VISIT CAPITAL

By Universal Service

Washington, March 9.—Three of the national winners of the Mt. Rushmore National Memorial competition, sponsored by the Boston Evening American and associated Hearst newspapers, spent one of the busiest days of their lives in the nation's capital.

They were 12-year-old Clyde Cucculla of New Orleans, Elmore Jeter, of Richmond, winner of the high school division and William Andrew Burkett, of Omaha, Nebraska, winner of the collegiate prize.

All three arrived in Washington yesterday morning as guests of the Hearst newspapers. Hardly had they registered at their hotel when a sight-seeing car was at the door, and they were off to a round of visits to historic sights.

The three boys, each of whom expressed themselves as regretful over the absence because of illness of John Edward Bradley of Los Angeles, winner of the national award in the adult division, apparently enjoyed every minute of the whirlwind tour.

They had their pictures taken with Speaker Byrnes of the House, listened momentarily to the acrimonious debates of the Senate and rode to the top of the Washington monument.

Today the boys will have their pictures taken with the Senators from their own states and members of the Mt. Rushmore National Memorial Commission, and continue their round of sightseeing.

They will return to their homes on Sunday.

NRA HIT, Connery Labor BILL BACKED

By International News

Washington, March 9.—The NRA has been tolerant to large industrialists who "openly and apparently successfully" have defied its regulations, the House labor committee charged today.

In a blistering report urging passage of a bill by Chairman Connery (D.) of Massachusetts, granting labor equal representation on code authorities, the recovery agency received its first formal criticism at the hands of a Democratic-controlled congressional committee.

"The workers of the country are extremely dissatisfied with both the administration and the enforcement of codes under the NRA," the report asserted.

The committee said it deplored the tolerance shown big industrialists who have defied the restrictions and regulations contained in the recovery act and questioned the wisdom of penalizing small business while permitting large employers of labor to continue their defiance of law.

It suggested that if the codes are to be continued one of the most important remedies for this intolerable situation would be equal representation of labor and industry on the code authorities.

Charges that industrial leaders flouted the monopoly laws for the purpose of profiteering also were made by the House group.

HITLER

Again Invites

BRITISH ENVOY

By Associated Press

London, March 9.—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler today extended a new invitation to Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, to visit Berlin in about two weeks, it was officially announced.

Konstantin Von Neurath, the German foreign minister, called the British ambassador, Sir Eric Phipps, to the foreign office at Berlin this morning and extended a new proposal for a date to discuss European peace proposals.

Von Neurath told the ambassador Hitler still had a cold, but would certainly be better by the time Sir John reached Berlin.

Sir Eric immediately reported to London, and it was stated the government was happy to have a new arrangement which was entirely satisfactory.

The government was particularly pleased that Germany had stuck consistently to Hitler's cold as the official reason for the postponement of the original visit.

ENTRANTS PREPARE FOR ICE CARNIVAL AT ARENA

PRETTY FIGURE—In more ways than one, Miss Polly Blodgett cuts a pretty figure on the ice. Besides being one of the most attractive entrants in the Arena Ice Carnival being staged by the Boston Skating Club, March 22 and 23, Miss Blodgett is right in among the fancy skaters. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

IT LOOKS EASY—but just try it sometime when you have your skates on. Joan Tozzer, one of the bright lights in the Ice Carnival, March 22 and 23, at the Arena, is doing her daily dozen in preparation for the event. She is finishing a fast whirl on the ice while bent over in a position that would upset most people without swirling around.

SPEAKING of news: The "Littman" of the Norfolk Golf Club of Dedham resumed whacking the little white agate at midday after an enforced "joff" caused by the heavy snow. They will also do their stuff tomorrow.

President Frank Clifford of the Norfolk Golf Club organized the "Littman" three years ago, and it takes a blanket of snow to keep them off the turf.

Al McCoy, Dorchester middleweight, is today a national figure in the boxing game as a result of his spectacular seven round knockout over Tait Littman of Milwaukee at the Garden.

Littman, conqueror of Lou Brouillard and other first class middleweights, was beaten to the canvas under a furious barrage of left and right hand punches.

McCoy started Littman's down fall with a sharp left hook to the jaw. He followed this attack with a right hand to the jaw. Littman went to the canvas for a count of nine.

Littman was in poor condition when he regained his feet. McCoy rushed him, and landed with heavy lefts and rights in the jaw. He was again dropped.

McCoy had the edge from the start. He received considerable opposition from Littman, who scored with hard, straight punches.

FOREVER TRYING

Al made a wild surge in the fourth, second he tried for a knockout. He beat Littman back during the ropes, then tried. Littman rallied as the round ended.

McCoy pressed his advantage in the fifth and sixth rounds, and then stepped out and scored his impressive victory in the seventh.

McCoy, of 303 persons paid $152 to see the show.

The net gate was $4288.

Jack McCarthy of Roxbury showed remarkable improvement during the ropes, then tried. Littman rallied as the round ended.

'Hangman in the House'

Story of a Young Girl's Terrible Experience In War-Time Austria

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Here, fellow adventurers, is a yarn of sheer horror—a tale of terror out of war-time Austria, when the Russian advance was in full swing and the Russian regiments were tramping the fertile Galician fields—when the world was falling in pieces and lust and cruelty ran riot in the blood-soaked, hell-stricken streets of a thousand towns and cities along the crumbling Eastern front.

Those were dark days for the people of those towns. Refugees fleeing from the stricken area brought out some horrible stories, boys and girls, and this yarn, from Betty Berger, of 1115 Franklin Avenue, Bronx, N. Y., is a good example. Betty is a girl of 15, and her mother was a nurse in the army. Betty and her mother were in the city of Vienna when the Russian advance was in full swing. Betty and her mother were in the city of Vienna when the Russian advance was in full swing. Betty and her mother were in the city of Vienna when the Russian advance was in full swing.

feels and would be a horror story to a war-torn...

The news stories, it was said, of the Russian troops were known to be cruel and ruthless. About seven or eight miles gathered in the house of Betty's uncle, and the men began looting doors—boarding up windows.

The women and children were crowded into the cellar. For three days they remained there, while the soldiers looted the house and then, they were taken out and the men were taken out into the street.

He came back, she said, carrying a box. The Russians had invaded the village, were killing people with their own hands, and destroying property. The whole town had been taken into a panic. The men had looted the houses again.

The young girls began dressing up as old women. They put on old clothes, lined their faces with ash and in the face used of their knowledge of cosmetic art, so that they themselves beautiful, but just the reverse. When the soldiers came, they looked like grandmothers. They huddled together in a corner, waiting or something to happen.

It was late that evening that they heard a light, stealthy tap on the back door. Betty's uncle called out—asked who it was, and recognized the sobbing voice that answered as that of one of his neighbor's girls. She stumbled, exhausted, into the house and told a harrowing tale of pursuit by Russian soldiers. The families held a conference and decided to send all the young women away to a peasant hut in the mountains where they could be safe. No sooner had they gone than they heard a creaking on the front door.

This time it was not a knock. The door was being broken in. It splintered and fell down with a crash and a bunch of Cossacks came tramping in with their rifles. They seized Betty's uncle and asked him what had become of the girl who had run into the house.

Then, looted up the house, the soldiers and the children and even screaming quail and lambs under their heels. "If you can't find the girl, kill her!" they all kept screaming. "Then, if you can't find her, kill her!" they all kept screaming. "Then, if you can't find her, kill her!" they all kept screaming.

They made Betty and her mother and the children and even screaming quail and lambs under their heels. "If you can't find the girl, kill her!" they all kept screaming. "Then, if you can't find her, kill her!" they all kept screaming. "Then, if you can't find her, kill her!" they all kept screaming.

Betty's uncle was put upon a chair now, the nose placed back his neck. The Cossacks were throwing the rope over a beam, when suddenly there came a step in the doorway, and the soldiers stopped their murderous work as a Russian officer came riding into the house.

The officer had heard the children's wails from outside, and he wanted to know why so many were crying at one time. In an instant he was surrounded by beseeching men and women, trying at once to tell their pitiful tale.

The officer listened patiently. Then he turned to the Cossacks and cut their heads off with a sword, and old-fashioned army "rescue" down. When the officer had ordered them out of the house and left, Betty and her mother and the children and even screaming quail and lambs under their heels. "If you can't find the girl, kill her!" they all kept screaming. "Then, if you can't find her, kill her!" they all kept screaming. "Then, if you can't find her, kill her!" they all kept screaming.

That, boys and girls, is the story of the thousands and thousands of heart-breaking stories that came out of Russia and Austria and eastern Germany during the terrible days of the war. Here must be literally thousands of people in Austria today who will tell such tales of horror and terror as the yarn Betty Berger has just told you. Please, please send more of these stories.

Monday read "Dragon in the Mud." A Willmansett man-up near Holyoke—tells a gripping tale of terror in the tropics.

Film Trio's Comedy Is Sell-Out

By GEORGE HOLLAND
"Hollywood Holiday" found quick favor, Opening Thursday, with Ben Lyon, Bebe Daniels and Skeets Gallagher tripling as an attractive stirring combination, this funny comedy—all comedies are not funny—sold out last night at the Plymouth.

Three actors around the box office for such a movie is a winning performance. In a comedy of the type, it is the actors who sell the picture. Ben Lyon, Bebe Daniels and Skeets Gallagher are a winning combination. The picture is a comedy, but it is a comedy that is not funny. It is a comedy that is a sell-out.

With Walter Flozak as her new leading man, Ina Claire comes to town from Maryland in "The Little Colonel" at the Plymouth.

TROUBLES OF NEW DEAL GROWING

RADICAL FORCES SPLIT

By LEWIS HANEY

(Professor of Economics New York University)

New York, March 9.—Politically, things seem to be coming to a head. This is the significance of the situation in Long and Coughlin. It may also be seen in the legislative jam in the Senate. The growing volume of adverse court decisions is another symptom.

The New Deal is not so new!

About a month ago, I pointed out that four hopes exist, namely: (1) that the radicals will fall out among themselves; (2) that the courts may stop their schemes; (3) that the New Deal will be forced to retreat; (4) that the forgotten American people will rise up and demand a change.

Now we can see signs of all these developments.

The most recent is the quarreling among the radicals. When such persons fall out, their cause does—reasonable men have a chance.

It has worked this way. First, Mr. Roosevelt came along with his "new deal" and a million voices.

He was followed by the first radical, and then by the second.

Now we can see signs of all these developments.

Joan Crawford's Role

"Garden of Allah" Screen Version Planned

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, March 9.—Shades of the exotic Nazimova. One of her most famous stage plays, "Garden of Allah," by Robert Hichens, will star Joan Crawford. David Selznick, who will produce it, has big plans to make it a spectacle with the wide sweep of desert sands and caravans of camels.

There is a great religious angle to the Hichens play. The man who leaves a monastery is never able to find happiness in the world, even when the woman he loves is eventually restored to him. In the play, the woman is a Jewess, and the man is a Christian. The play is a story of love and religion, and it is a story of a man who finds happiness in the world when he is reunited with the woman he loves.

Modern Music

By ANN AMES

Of contrasting talents and widely divergent results, three modern composers were represented on yesterday's program by the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The contemporary notables were Maurice Ravel, whose sixtieth birthday was celebrated this week; Jean Sibelius, whose seventy and living in monastic seclusion at Järvenpää, and Philip Lasser, just past forty.

The inevitable conclusion is that the seniors outrank their younger contemporaries in music as in other fields. Mr. Lasser, who played his third Piano Concerto for the first time with Dr. Koussevitzky and the orchestra yesterday, must forgive a comparison that is obviously unfair. Yet it cannot be questioned that his new work emerged, at first hearing, as a laudable and to listen to an inspired composition.

Set between Ravel's "La Tombe de Couperin" and the "Pavane et Choeur" suite, and the rich and stirring Symphony, his pallid measures suffer irreparably.

A magnificent reading was given the Sibelius. The breadth and power of the composition, considered by many the finest work of the great Finnish composer, has never been more stirring and majestic.

Air Epic At Scollay

"Devil Dogs of the Air," the rough and delightfully rowdy comedy adventure of a couple of fellows in the Marine Flying Corps, is the screen feature on the new Scollay Square yesterday.

The exciting tale of the daredevil aviators, produced by Cosmopolitan, with the cooperation of the United States government, will also be the major attraction at the new Scollay Square yesterday.

STERLING DROP

Hurts
GOVERNMENT
Bonds

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The decline in sterling is embarrassing treasury officials. They had counted on a huge conversion of federal issues at a lower coupon rate in the near future.

The drop of the pound, however, forced semi-official statements in favor of the price level at home was not yet fully understood. The reason one supposes was to place psychological barrier in front of those who had sterling and bought dollars. But it proved to be a two-sided barrier. And buyers of government bonds hesitated for current high prices and low yields refused to budge. They expected it drops as even rate prices here in the near future.

After all low yields in themselves purchase power. And if steps are taken to raise prices, even higher something must happen to compensate the loss. This is usually a fall in the price of bonds and a rise in the price of stocks.

LOWERMOST GROUPS
SHOW LOSSES

New York, March 9.—Heavy losses in the stock market today were the result of a market ragged appearance with losses ranging from minor fractions to a point or more well scattered. Trading continued light.

Pressure was renewed on the rails, oil, and some of the leading industrial shares.

Standard Oil of N. J. and Socony Vacuum fell under their year's low.

In the railroad group there were reductions of Atchafalaya, Union Pacific, New York Central, Southern Pacific and Chesapeake & Ohio, which broke to a new low again, as losses ran to a point.

Most of the other groups suffered fractional losses. Industrial shares including U. S. Steel were lower.

Wall Street closed

Wall Street came to the close of the week in somewhat better frame of mind, what with the more stable price of sterling, trade reports showing a quickening of retail demand for the movement of freight, although the volume still failed to get above the like week of last year.

In the automobile group, the industry was seen as a whole, but by an announcement of the new organization of the new reorganized Chrysler Corp. that sharp price cuts in the future would be effected.

The question of taxation was reported to the fore by the annual report of U. S. Rubber, P. R. Davison, president, pointed out that the loss for 1933 of $800,000 was cut to $543,600 in 1934, but heavy taxes were a big item of expense, amounting to $767,000, of which about $339,000 consisted of federal excise and other taxes.

The pound sterling opened at 46 1/2, while the French franc was 20 1/2, a cent higher at 84 1/2 cents.

The week-end session on the Boston Stock Exchange was a regular affair.

Opening at 86, up a minor fraction, the big local phone company was the feature, with a 1/2 cent advance.

Industrial shares for the most part did little and were content to hold close to previous closing.
